Pleated Wrappers.

WE have, from time to time, called attention to the phenomenal success of our patent Pleated Wrappers. They are now used by the majority of the larger publishers of magazines, and meet, in the truest sense of the term, "a long felt want." We have been compelled to install another machine for the manufacture of these Wrappers, and are therefore in a position to fill any orders on the shortest possible notice. Should there be any of our friends who have not received particulars of these Wrappers, we should be pleased to receive notification, so as to enable us to forward sample and quotation for quantities. They can be made to any size to suit every individual requirement, and at a price which is strictly competitive, and brings them within the reach of all.

Fixture Sheets, etc.

WE have received from Messrs. Taylor Bros., Colour Printers, Leeds, illustrated lists of their Football Fixture and Advertising Sheets. They form quite a seasonable line, and will no doubt be popular amongst suburban and provincial printers. We note that they are supplied in quite a large selection of designs and sizes, and we would recommend our readers to obtain a copy of the illustrated catalogue submitted to us. This firm also make a feature of calendars of every description; letter racks, date blocks, as well as blank show-cards and labels, patriotic cards, posters and zenith transparencies, all of which are fully described in the 16-page list already referred to.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

OUR page for Miscellaneous Advertisements is open for the free use of our customers and their employees, and it is hoped they will make more and more use of it as occasion requires. At the same time we hope advertisers will keep us posted with their address after asking us to insert an announcement. We are constantly having letters returned to us with the cryptic phrase "Gone, no address."

WE should be pleased if advertisers in the "Miscellaneous" column would keep us posted with any change in their address, after asking us to insert an announcement. We are constantly receiving replies for advertisers, and, when forwarded, having them returned to us through the "Dead Letter Office." To say the least, this is unsatisfactory from every point of view.

Labour newspapers cannot be said, so far, to have proved a success. The Daily Herald has been secured by the Socialist party, and the Daily Citizen is strenuously appealing for funds.

The "Dryden Copy" of the first folio edition of Shakespeare recently fetched £1,950, a record price, at Sotheby's.

The censorship of picture postcards goes on apace. A Censorship Committee of dealers is suggested at Cleethorpes for the purpose of cleansing the trade of coarse, vulgar and obscene designs.

Mr. Justice Darling recently compared the Trades Disputes Act to the Gambling Act, and stated that it contained one of the most extraordinary clauses ever put into an Act of Parliament.

The result of the "Miehle" action appears to maintain the status quo. The action by Linotype and Machinery, Ltd., is dismissed; the counter-claim by the Chicago Miehle Manufacturing Co. has failed; the action against the British Miehle Company is also unsuccessful; and each party has to pay its own costs.

The will of Mr. A. Chatto, of Messrs. Chatto and Windus, shows an estate valued at £14,054; that of Mr. W. S. Millington, wholesale stationer, Budge Row, E.C., at £33,655; that of Mr. J. Bass, late managing director of Messrs. Waterlow and Sons, Ltd., at £273,451; that of Mr. G. Munt, fancy box maker, etc., at £68,726; and that of Mr. R. H. Allen, of Messrs. David Allen and Son, at £65,221.

Hungary has at last announced the intention to join the Berlin-Berne Convention for the international protection of copyright.

At the eighth meeting of the International Publishers' Congress, recently held at Budapest, under the patronage of Arch-Duke Joseph of Austria-Hungary, the chief matter for consideration was the new Copyright Act, and the many privileges it conferred upon authors, etc.

The Third Civil Court of France has decided that a photographer who gives permission to a publisher to reproduce any of his works or sells the copyright in them, has a right to demand that the reproductions bear his name or imprint.

A recent Government report shows that there has been a considerable falling off recently in the amount of white packing and wrapping papers exported from the United States to British ports.

The following resolution was passed at a recent meeting of the Federation of Master Printers in Liverpool: — "That this meeting expresses its strong disapproval of the methods of firms who supply plant and material to enable individuals to start in the printing business, without sufficient capital, on the instalment system or on deferred payments, thus compelling them, in despair of meeting the payments, to take work at ruinous prices.

May we again remind our readers that we always keep on hand a large stock of job lines in every class of paper. Some of them are enumerated in this issue, but it is impossible for us to issue a comprehensive list. Send your requirements, and we will immediately communicate with you.

PRACTICAL NOTES

New Opportunities for the Typographer.

THE printing industry has changed and progressed so rapidly during the past dozen years that many splendid new opportunities have come for the alert typographer who is seeking something better than just a plain "scale" position. A foremanship a few years ago was the highest ambition, perhaps, that a good compositor could attain, but to-day, in many of the large modern printing plants and the great advertising agencies throughout the country, there are special positions open to progressive typographers that are far more advantageous than the average foremanship and with much better compensation. Advertisement writing. Take the writing of any laying-out of advertisements for an example: This work can only be successfully performed by trained men from the printing craft, yet there are hundreds of misguided people taking mail courses in advertising art who know not the name or size of any type series! Such students may develop into good copy writers, but without working as a typographer in a good composing-room they can never "set type" in display style on paper. If a compositor can set good display work on his frame, there is no good reason why he could not do the same work with crayon on paper. What he requires in addition to this ability, however, is the training for writing in modern advertising style and coining of catchy adjectives and expressions. Who has more interesting slogans and phrases at his command than the average printer? The compositor during the course of his career handles copy and type matter covering almost every subject, and naturally becomes well informed upon the details of their construction; thus, were a good typographer to take up the study of advertising at home during spare evenings, the course would soon become easy and progress very rapid. For success in advertising write-up, one is supposed to have "originality," which only means, after all, writing in a new and better manner the things that have already been written. The Comp.-Designer.—The head-comp. position is still another opportunity which has recently come in the big plants for job compositors who can produce the newest and best in art typography. There were, perhaps, head-comps. ever since the beginning of printing, but only a few years ago did the employing printers come to recognize the importance and scarcity of these specialists. To-day there are in many large composing-rooms positions open for high-class job-comps. who can produce fine art work, but there are few men to supply the demand. Any ordinary careful job compositor, or even a "plain hand" or book compositor for that matter, can become a head dispay comp. if he be willing to pay the "price"—which is constant, faithful study of the leading trade papers during evenings at home. "You can be what you will," but not in working just eight hours a day on straight matter or make-up. Let any compositor, with ordinary good health and determination to succeed, take a class course and the best printers' journals; select, say, two certain evenings of each week for careful study of these, and he is sure to go just as high as he wishes to in the business. In this same manner the typographer who seems to possess talent in the fine arts can take up cartooning, hand-lettering and sketching at the evening schools in the big cities. One young job compositor took an evening course in one of the art schools and to-day is well known as a cover designer for the national magazines. And then there are other positions, such as newspaper correspondent, reporter, editor, etc., that seem to develop in a natural way from printerdom. The compositor seems to be fitted for any of these positions much better than the average college graduate, who, after all, only works on theory.

In the near future, big national manufacturing concerns, instead of placing their advertising with agencies, are going to have their own departments for this indispensable service. Here is another opportunity for the ambitious compositor who would like to study advertising. Most of these big concerns have private printing plants in conjunction with their advertising departments. No reason why the compositor could not train to hold the management of any of these departments.

With the great national magazines there has come an unique position of an expert job compositor. This position is held by what is known as "the final man" or the "critique," and after the advertising had been set up, made up, and all the text pages arranged, before going to foundry, the pages are minutely examined by the said "critique," who takes his pencil and marks any improvements in the advts. or text that may seem necessary. Often a "point out here" and a "point in there" makes a remarkable improvement in a text or advt. page, and here is where the "final man" comes in.
